Any other relevant information: PACS Radiology Software

In parent hospital, PACS (Picture Archiving and Communication System) plays a critical role in enhancing the education of nursing students. It allows students to access, review, and analyze medical images such as X-rays, CT scans, and MRIs in a digital format, enabling a deeper understanding of diagnostic imaging and patient care.

Through PACS, students can explore real-world case studies, understand how images are used in clinical decision-making, and collaborate with other healthcare professionals like radiologists. This hands-on experience with digital imaging helps students grasp the importance of accurate diagnosis and treatment planning, equipping them with the skills necessary for modern healthcare environments.

Additionally, PACS allows for remote access, making it easier for students to engage in group discussions, presentations, and online learning. By incorporating this advanced technology into our curriculum, we provide a comprehensive learning platform that prepares nursing students for the challenges of the healthcare industry, emphasizing the importance of technology in patient care.
