The Community Health Nursing Department of Sree Narayana Nursing College is actively involved in providing health education to various sections of the community through outreach programs. Faculty members, along with students under their supervision, regularly conduct health education sessions in community health centers, Anganwadi schools, and different community areas. These sessions cover a wide range of important health topics aimed at promoting awareness and improving the overall health of the community.

Key topics include maternal and child health, where they emphasize antenatal care, breastfeeding practices, and immunization schedules for infants and children. They also address nutrition and balanced diets for different age groups, focusing on the importance of essential nutrients and healthy eating habits. In the field of personal hygiene and sanitation, the team educates the community on handwashing, oral hygiene, and proper waste disposal to prevent communicable diseases.

Furthermore, sessions on non-communicable diseases such as diabetes, hypertension, and cardiovascular diseases raise awareness about risk factors, prevention, and management strategies. The faculty also discusses mental health, promoting stress management techniques and offering support resources. Additionally, family planning and reproductive health topics are covered to help individuals make informed decisions regarding contraception and safe pregnancy practices.

These health education initiatives are crucial in empowering the community with knowledge and fostering healthier lifestyles, contributing significantly to public health improvement.

- Disease Prevention: Basic information on common illnesses like colds, flu, and the importance of vaccinations was provided to the students.

After the educational session, a health check-up camp was organized, where the NSS volunteers, under the supervision of faculty from the Community Health Nursing Department, conducted basic health screenings for the students. The screenings included:

- Height and Weight Measurement: To assess the students' growth and development.
- Vision Screening: To identify any vision problems that may require further examination.
- General Health Check-up: To evaluate the overall health and detect any signs of common illnesses.

The health check-up provided valuable insights into the students' health status, and those who needed further medical attention were referred to local health facilities.

In addition to the health education and screenings, informative pamphlets on nutrition, hygiene, and disease prevention were distributed to the students. These pamphlets were designed to reinforce the key messages delivered during the program and to provide parents with guidance on maintaining their children's health at home.

The program concluded with a vote of thanks by the headmistress of Z.P. High School, Venkatachalam, who expressed gratitude to Sree Narayana Nursing College's NSS Unit and the Community Health Nursing Department for their
